2	I couldn't go this last week to a Paint Creek outing, though I wanted to. I'm a new member, so I have yet to get involved, but I was excited to go to this fishing trip.	6/21/2014 10:49 AM
3	Get more in put off of the people attending the meetings, by asking for questions or ideas they may have. Have "new" members, or visitors, introduce themselves when they attend the meetings, where they're from & why they wanted to join. Kind of an "ice breaker".	6/20/2014 10:47 AM

1	Some how reach to non active members to become active, this is a hard one.	6/25/2014 12:21 PM
2	.	6/20/2014 10:47 AM
3	Personally I don't fish but I think that keeping the streams(and our water supply) healthy is important. Healthy trout should mean healthy steams.	6/15/2014 8:46 PM
4	When I joined TU, I believe that I was automatically put into the Vanguard chapter because of my home address. However, I don't ever receive any communications via traditional mail or email regarding activities. This has caused me to be un-involved with the club. I would like to engage but some kind of communication every so often would help significantly.	6/9/2014 12:23 PM
5	Encourage new ideas and methods. Just because it not work before is no reason it would not work now. Also if someone is willing to champion an project support it. Some of our board members are too negative.	6/9/2014 8:54 AM
6	Hello, I have not attended a meeting for some time because of work commitments. I generally enjoyed them when I did attend. It might help scheduling if an e-mail was sent a week or 10 days before a meeting as a reminder as well as the topic for the meeting.	6/8/2014 11:43 PM
7	Are there warmwater conservation / fly fishing groups that we can meet or have some form of exchanges with? TU isn't the only group that's writing the book on conservation. Same for groups supporting trails, etc. Maybe Sierra Club?	6/8/2014 9:50 PM
8	I would be willing to help out more , but , I am working 3 jobs to make ends meet ,I wish I was able to attend meeting, help out ,but I just am unable, I got a free membership last year and I am unable to renew it,so I look at the web site when I can and see what you guys are up to an your continued efforts, I hope I can remain on your e-mail list in the future ,Thank Gerald Zielinski	6/8/2014 9:24 PM
